

Jesus says not to judge, yet the rest of the passage seems to show how to rightly evaluate a person's life and ministry? What do you believe Jesus meant by "do not judge?"

What is the world's meaning to "do not judge?" How is it often hypocritical?

What makes for a good apple tree? What is good fruit in our lives? What does it say about us?

How do our words and actions reveal our true condition? What do we do about the times we feel they conflict?

Is your life marked by perfect obedience? If not, what confidence do you have that it won't all come crashing down?

Does this passage challenge, encourage, correct or teach you more about the beauty of the gospel?
